MFM NETWORKS ARE ONE OF THE CORE VALUES - AND BENEFITS - OF ASSOCIATION MEMBERSHIP.

The Networks are communities of financial professionals from a cross-section of the media and entertainment industry and a variety of financial disciplines that share knowledge, seek solutions to common problems, identify topics and speakers for MFM educational programs, and stay abreast of industry trends. Formerly called "Committees," we changed their name to "Networks" to reflect the importance of the connections between individuals and organizations that these groups foster.

Networks meet via teleconference every two to three months. Calls often focus on a particular issue important to Network members, such as effective recruitment and retention methods or pending changes to financial regulations. Teleconferences may feature a presentation from a subject matter expert on the topic or a roundtable discussion in which members exchange ideas.

In either case, Network members come away from these sessions better informed about an issue, with tangible ideas to put in place at their company, or with a connection to a professional who can help them address their particular situation.

Even more important, participation in MFM Networks provides financial professionals the opportunity to expand their own professional network, opening the door to business relationships with like-minded colleagues, and with other organizations and innovations that make them successful.

Participation is MFM Networks free, but the knowledge gained on Network teleconferences is invaluable. Visit our website to learn more:
